THIS FINAL ORDER IS NONPRECEDENTIAL<sup>1</sup>

Ronald P. Ackerman, Esquire, Culver City, California, for the appellant.

Trenton Bowen, Keyport, Washington, for the agency.

FINAL ORDER

The appellant has filed a petition for review of the initial decision, which denied corrective action in his individual right of action (IRA) appeal. Generally, we grant petitions such as this one only in the following circumstances: the initial decision contains erroneous findings of material fact; the initial decision is based on an erroneous interpretation of statute or regulation or the erroneous

A nonprecedential order is one that the Board has determined does not add significantly to the body of MSPB case law. Parties may cite nonprecedential orders, but such orders have no precedential value; the Board and administrative judges are not required to follow or distinguish them in any future decisions. In contrast, a precedential decision issued as an Opinion and Order has been identified by the Board as significantly contributing to the Board's case law. See 5 C.F.R. § 1201.117(c).

application of the law to the facts of the case; the administrative judge's rulings during either the course of the appeal or the initial decision were not consistent with required procedures or involved an abuse of discretion, and the resulting error affected the outcome of the case; or new and material evidence or legal argument is available that, despite the petitioner's due diligence, was not available when the record closed. Title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations, section 1201.115 (5 C.F.R. § 1201.115). After fully considering the filings in this appeal, we conclude that the petitioner has not established any basis under section 1201.115 for granting the petition for review. Therefore, we DENY the petition for review and AFFIRM the initial decision, which is now the Board's final decision. 5 C.F.R. § 1201.113(b).

On review, the appellant raises a number of procedural arguments that he claims "resulted in unfavorable conditions for a proper decision to be made in this case." Petition for Review (PFR) File, Tab 1 at 6. First, he alleges that the hearing had to be postponed for a month because one of the witnesses was unavailable and that the time gap may "have made it difficult for the administrative judge to decipher between disputed testimony and fact." Id. This is inaccurate. The administrative judge afforded the parties a choice between going forward with the hearing as scheduled and reconvening at a later date to take the unavailable witness's testimony or rescheduling the entire hearing and the parties chose the former. Initial Appeal File, Tab 29. Moreover, administrative judges must frequently conduct hearings on nonconsecutive days or reconvene hearings to take the testimony of previously unavailable witnesses. The appellant's mere speculation that the administrative judge's adjudication of the case might have been compromised by the time gap between witnesses is not a sufficient reason to disturb the initial decision.

Second, the appellant asserts that it took more than 180 days from the conclusion of the hearing to the issuance of the initial decision, and he implies that the case was too complicated for the administrative judge to grasp because of all the jargon and idiosyncratic regulations involved. PFR File, Tab 1 at 6-7. A delay between the date of the hearing and the issuance of the initial decision, without some evidence of prejudice, is not a basis for disturbing the initial decision. As to the complexity of the case, we disagree with the appellant's assumption that the unfamiliar jargon and rules in this case were materially more difficult than in the Board's other cases, and we do not find the legal issues in this appeal to be unusually complex.

Third, it appears that the appellant argues that the testimony of key witnesses for the agency went unrebutted because the appellant's counsel decided not to interpose objections "for fear of appearing confrontational or disrespectful." PFR File, Tab 1 at 7. We see no prejudice to the appellant's substantive rights because he had an opportunity to cross-examine the agency's witnesses if he preferred not to interpose objections. Counsel's tactical decisions concerning how to handle witnesses for the agency and the consequences flowing therefrom are his own responsibility and are not a reason to set aside the initial decision. Sofio v. Internal Revenue Service, 7 M.S.P.R. 667, 670 (1981) (stating that the appellant is responsible for the errors of his chosen representative).

Fourth, the appellant submits what he contends is new and material evidence in the form of an Inspector General report, issued 2 months after the conclusion of the hearing and received 1 month later, concluding that three of the appellant's four disclosures were substantiated. PFR File, Tab 1 at 7 & copy of report. The report was available to the appellant 3 months before the date of the initial decision, and the appellant has not explained why he did not send the report to the administrative judge. Under 5 C.F.R. § 1201.115(d), the Board generally will not consider evidence submitted for the first time with the petition for review absent a showing that it was unavailable before the record was closed despite the party's due diligence. Avansino v. U.S. Postal Service, 3 M.S.P.R. 211, 214 (1980). The report is also not material because the issue in an IRA appeal is not whether the agency committed waste, fraud, abuse, etc., but whether the agency retaliated against the appellant for reporting waste, fraud, and abuse. The Board generally will not grant a petition for review based on new evidence absent a showing that it is of sufficient weight to warrant an outcome different from that of the initial decision. Russo v. Veterans Administration, 3 M.S.P.R. 345, 349 (1980).<sup>2</sup>

The appellant also alleges that the administrative judge erred by finding that the agency proved by clear and convincing evidence that it would have terminated him absent any protected activity. We have reviewed the record and the appellant's arguments, in particular his argument about changing electronic inventory entries. We find these arguments unpersuasive and conclude that the appellant has provided no basis to disturb the initial decision.<sup>3</sup>
